EICHMANN TRIAL REVIEWS NAZI ATTEMPT AT REVOLUTION TO TURN BACK PROGRESS, OBLITERATE CULTURE, ENSLAVE PEOPLES TO DICTATOR, WITH JEWS, IN GREAT TRAGEDY, AS THE FIRST BUT NOT THE ONLY VICTIMS

At the trial of Adolf Eichmann in the Jerusalem court for the murder of millions of Jews, the prosecution submitted a series of documents showing the connection between Eichmann and the former Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin El Husseini, says the Israel Digest. These included letters which were written by the Mufti to Himmler and other German leaders asking them to prevent any emigration of Jewish children or others to Palestine, and a proposal that the Axis powers "recognize the right of Palestine and the Arab countries to solve the question of the Jewish elements in Palestine and the Arab countries in accordance with the Arab national interests and in the same way as this question was solved in the Axis countries."

On November 2, 1943, the anniversary of the issue of the Balfour Declaration, Himmler wrote to the Mufti, "The National Socialist Movement has inscribed on its banner (as one of its principles) the war against World Jewry. Therefore, the Nazi Party has followed with special sympathy the war of the peace-loving Arabs against the Jews, especially against the Jewish invaders in Palestine. Recognition of this enemy, and our mutual war against him, constitutes the natural alliance between the German Nazis and the peace-loving Moslems."

Attorney General Gideon Hausner also dealt with Eichmann's claim that he had acted on superior orders. This defense was inacceptable for three reasons, he said. Firstly, the Nazis and Nazi Collaborators Law expressly excluded this plea; secondly, obedience to orders serves as defense only when the orders are lawful, and this is true also of German military law; thirdly, Eichmann had not confined himself to orders, but had been "the driving force of the extermination program, who carried out instructions to their bitter end."

Eichmann himself had testified that he never saw written orders from Hitler regarding the extermination of the Jews. And even if he had seen such orders, they had no legal basis, since there was no law on the matter "even in Nazi Germany."

The Attorney General then went on to discuss the plea that an individual cannot be held personally responsible for carrying out an act of State, but is protected by the sovereignty of the State, says the Israel Digest. He pointed out that when the individual's act contravenes international law, the authorities have held that he must be punished. The Nazis and Nazi Collaborators Law, the substantive law of Israel, and Common Law did not recognize the applicability of this plea in the field of criminal law, he added.

Eichmann's standard excuse was that all the defense witnesses were lying, and that only he was telling the truth, Mr. Hausner said. The Attorney General refuted Eichmann's claim that he had been only a 'little cog' in the Nazi machinery. "No 'little cog' could stand up to cross-examination as Eichmann did. He is a man who possesses capable intelligence . . . He displayed stature, even if it was diabolic, during his interrogation . . . " "Until this day, Eichmann does not believe that murdering Jews is a crime. He knew that he was transgressing every accepted and sanctified moral principle, but he continued to serve his Fuehrer, and his country, by deporting the Jews," Mr. Hausner declared.

The Nazis and Nazi Collaborators Law defined crimes against the Jewish people as acts committed with intent to destroy the Jewish people in whole or part; killing Jews, causing bodily or mental harm to them; and placing them in physical conditions calculated to bring about their physical destruction, the Attorney General said. The prosecution had proved that all these acts had been carried out, that Goering had given Heydrich the task of finding a "final solution," and that Eichmann had served under Heydrich.

It had also been proved, he continued, that Eichmann was Heydrich's Referrent in Jewish matters regarding all the Jews of Europe, says the Israel Digest. Eichmann's connection with deportations from the Reich, slaughter by the Einsatzgruppen, the death of hundreds of thousands of Jews in forced labor camps, and mass deportations and concentrations in ghettoes had been proved, Mr. Hausner declared.

Eichmann was accused of crimes against humanity in that he had "persecuted Jews on national, racial, religious, and political grounds," and this covered all his activities from his task in Vienna until the end of the War, the Attorney General said. It had also been proved, as stated in the seventh count, that he engaged in spoliation, through direct plunder, forced evacuation, and the levying of compulsory payments on Jews to finance their own deportation. Mr. Hausner accused Eichmann of responsibility for the despatch of a trainload of 1,500 Jews to Auschwitz behind the backs of the Hungarian authorities, who had ordered deportations stopped, and for the death march of Budapest Jewry. "Eichmann lusted to send these Jews to their deaths, even if he had no orders, even if he had to overcome great difficulties. This is the true Eichmann," Mr. Hausner declared. He had, together with others, devised measures for preventing childbirth among Jews, and had participated in meetings on mass sterilization experiments, Mr. Hausner added.

Eichmann had admitted having been in charge of the uprooting of Poles and Slovenes from German-occupied Poland and the deportation of gypsies, and these constituted crimes against humanity under counts ten and eleven. He had also admitted having entered the S.S. and the S.D., which had been held at Nuremberg to be criminal organizations, of his own free will and having remained there voluntarily. Within the framework of the S.S., he was subject to the German Military Code which makes it a crime to carry out a manifestly unlawful order.

"We have reviewed the revolution which the Nazis sought to bring about in Europe — to turn back the wheels of progress, to obliterate the achievements of culture and to entrench slavish obedience to a dictator," Mr. Hausner said, reports the Israel Digest. "The Jewish people, to its great tragedy, were the Nazi's first victims, although there are plentiful signs that if the Germans had been victorious, they would not have been the last."

Adolf Eichmann admitted during the trial that the disposal of the children of Lidice and the supplying of 150 skeletons of Jews for Heinrich Himmler's skull collection were matters referred to him, says the New York Times. But they were "very strange" requests, "completely outside our sphere," Eichmann contended at his trial.

He said he had referred both matters to his Gestapo (secret police) boss, Heinrich Mueller, who perhaps had issued orders for their implementation to Maj. Rolf Guenther, Eichmann's deputy, without Eichmann's knowledge. "I was no dealer in skulls," Eichmann protested to his Israeli judges as he told of the request by Himmler, chief of the Nazi S. S. (élite guard).

Eichmann, a lieutenant colonel who headed the Jewish Affairs Department of the Gestapo, denied any knowledge of the fate of the children of Lidice, the Czech village which was razed in 1942 in reprisal for the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, Nazi "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia. At first Eichmann maintained that he could not remember what happened at Lidice.

"Let me remind you," the prosecutor, Attorney General Gideon Hausner, said. "Your superior, Heydrich, was assassinated and the Germans avenged themselves on the children of Lidice. Surely this was not an ordinary occurrence?"

Eichmann thought a moment. "The assassination . . . definitely . . . yes . . . I remember it clearly," he said. "But the affair of the children I do not remember . . . Of course, I heard about it subsequently."

Mr. Hausner cited documents showing that Herman Krumey, an S. S. mayor and director of the deportation center at Lodz, Poland, had telephoned Eichmann for instructions on what to do with the Lidice children, who had just arrived, says the New York Times. The fact that Eichmann was considered the appropriate authority in both the matter of the Lidice children and of the skeletons of Jews was pressed by Mr. Hausner as he battered at Eichmann's plea that he was only a small cog in the Nazi genocide apparatus.

"Look here," Mr. Hausner cried. "Do you mean to say Krumey did not know who was competent to deal with this matter? Don't you remember him writing to you about it later?"

"Maybe he wrote to other departments, could not get a reply, and then wrote to me," Eichmann suggested in a low voice.

"But in his letter he refers to a telephone conversation with you," Mr. Hausner thundered. Eichmann looked nonplussed for an instant then stammered: "Ja, I have it, have the perfect answer. As Krumey's past correspondence on the subject of transports to the eastern areas had been directed to us, he probably thought his letter about the children, too, should come to my department."

"But the children had nothing to do with the transport question," Mr. Hausner pressed. "Why did Krumey contact you? Why you?" Eichmann said gruffly: "Well, Krumey is now in prison in Germany. Ask him about it."

When Mr. Hausner persisted, Eichmann repeated: "Ask Krumey — I do not know." He then sat down abruptly.

The prosecution submitted evidence that most of the one hundred Lidice children seized by the Nazis perished in gas chambers at Chelmo.

Krumey had testified that the Lidice children were marked for "special treatment," a Nazi euphemism for extermination, says the New York Times. But Eichmann insisted that "Sonderbehandlung," the German for "special treatment," was a word of manifold meanings and could imply something far less sinister, such as "Germanization."

Some of the Lidice children were in fact adopted by German families. The defense had introduced an affidavit from a woman who said she saw other Lidice children alive and well in a convent just before the Soviet army entered Poland.

When he turned to the case of the skulls, Mr. Hausner said it was a hobby of Himmler's to collect skulls for the Nazi "Ancestral Heritage Institute" at Strasbourg. Eichmann said he could not remember a request for skeletons or skulls from a Himmler aide, Col. Wolfram Sievers.

"But this must have been unusual," the Attorney General said. "You were asked for 150 human skeletons and you cannot remember? It did not happen to you every day?"

"I only know that someone came and demanded skeletons or skulls and I told him I was not a skull trader," Eichmann replied.

Eichmann maintained that all he did was transport Jews to concentration camps and that he had no responsibility for what happened to them in the death camps. Mr. Hausner tried to destroy this claim by showing that high S. S. officials regarded Eichmann as a likely supplier of skeletons. Eichmann insisted plaintively: "I cannot possibly think what this matter has to do with me."

As he repetitiously unrolled his function in shipping millions of Jews off to extermination camps, he began to ring familiar bells in the mind of the courtroom spectator. One suddenly heard speaking the faceless "company man" of the oversized industrial organization, the alibi-ridden, buck-passing, double-talking, reading-by-ear personality who has been drained of native emotion and principle and filled with an unreal ideology.

Alexander Arnon, wartime secretary of the Jewish community in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, brought up the name of Andrija Artukovic, Minister of Interior in the Nazi-sponsored Croatian Government headed by Ante Pavelic, says the New York Times. The prosecution submitted several documents relating to Artukovic, whose extradition, at the request of Yugoslavia, was refused by the United States.

"Where is he now?" Judge Benyamin Halevi asked the witness. "Today he is either in New York or California," said Mr. Arnon.

Judge Halevi continued: "And he executed anti-Jewish measures on orders from Germany?"

"I can't say directly that this was according to German orders because I have no proof for it," the witness replied. "But this was, after all, common knowledge at the time."

Yugoslavia came under attention at the trial. In no other country has the fate of the Jews during World War II been more difficult to trace. Testimony shed little new light on the mystery.

Mr. Arnon, who now lives in Israel, contended that 60,000 of the 75,000 Jews of Yugoslavia had perished. He praised the Tito regime. Jews generally suffered at the hands of non-Communist Yugoslav factions. He said that 8,000 Yugoslav Jews had come to Israel "thanks to the generosity of the Tito Government", while 2,000 more were in America or Australia.

Mr. Arnon did not implicate Eichmann in his description of the impact of the Nazi occupation on Yugoslavia. However, Yaacov Baror, Assistant Prosecutor, submitted documents that in part were calculated to prove that Gestapo officers directing the anti-Jewish operations there were under Eichmann's command.

Mr. Arnon said that the Gestapo confiscated all funds of the Jewish Community of Zagreb and arrested everyone found in the Jewish community offices. He testified that Croatian Fascists were willing partners of the Nazis.

The Zagreb Jewish Community Council pleaded with Artukovic and the Gestapo for the lives of fifty children about to be deported to death camps, he said, reports the New York Times. Mr. Arnon said he had been unable to follow the negotiations because he had been jailed for 100 days but he said that when he emerged he found that only eleven children had been saved and sent to Palestine and that the others had been killed.

Mr. Arnon said he regretted that, although Croatia was a "Catholic state", the Catholic Church in Croatia did not raise its voice and did not say a word in protest against the deportation of Jews."

Mr. Arnon produced a yellow badge with a shield of David and a letter (for "Zidov," which is "Jew" in Serbo-Croatian) and said a Gestapo officer named Mueller had ordered him to prepare 10,000 such emblems. All Jews had to wear them, including babies, he said. The sight of this shamed some German officers who angrily tore the badges off the children, he added.

Mr. Arnon said Croatian Fascists ran most of the concentration camps in Croatia and killed "hundreds of thousands" of Serbian gentiles. In Jasenovac alone, 600,000 persons, including 2,000 Jews, were killed, he said.

He said the Gestapo had allowed him to make three visits to Budapest to get assistance for Jewish prisoners from the American Joint Distribution Committee. Food was bought at inflated prices but most of it never reached the camps and was looted by the Croatian Fascists.

Mr. Arnon said he was released from jail after the American committee made further relief payments conditional on his release.

- The Canadian Jewish Review is one of only 35 Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada, and one of only three published weekly in English. It gives wide, city-to-city coverage for your advertising message, to a high-ranking consumer audience. Received every Friday in the mail, it is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing, in able-to-buy homes. Sold by subscription only, the Canadian Jewish Review reaches a select market weekly, families who are receptive to the best in goods and services.
- The Canadian Jewish Review fills a definite need as a link between the individual family and the whole Jewish world at large. It is informative about the trends in Jewish thought and social welfare in these changing times; the important Jewish world news; and reports on the organizational life of all ages in the Jewish group, and all interests in the family, particularly business and professional executives, homemakers and young people.
- The Canadian Jewish Review carries more lineage in Florida Resort advertising during the winter season, than any other publication in Canada, daily or weekly; specialized or general; and more single resort advertising accounts than any publication except the New York Times. No account is a contra account. Advertising of the airlines and steamship lines serving this great resort area appears regularly. The Montreal and Toronto Israel Bond Drive meetings — like the New York conferences — have been held there in the winter season.
- The Canadian Jewish Review net paid circulation of June 30, 1961, as reported in the A.B.C. Publisher's Statement, of June 30, 1961, was an increase over July 1, 1960, of 11.88%; an [illegible] subject to audit by the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Britain's Jews And The Liberal Spirit

BY MONTY JACOBS

Church bells and trumpets proclaimed the election last fall of Sir Bernard Waley-Cohen as 633rd Lord Mayor of London. As he assumed the responsibilities of office, his scarlet Alderman's robe gave the ceremony a touch of ancient pomp and brilliant color.

The British saw nothing special in the fact that the new Lord Mayor was a Jew — seventh in London's history. Later, during the inaugural procession, a handful of rowdies from the British National Party threw firecrackers at Sir Bernard's carriage and shouted, "We don't want a Jewish Lord Mayor." But theirs was an isolated act, frowned upon and considered embarrassing by most. The people of London generally viewed the election of a Jew as Lord Mayor with the matter-of-fact attitude that they have to listening to the BBC.

There is little anti-Semitic prejudice in the United Kingdom today. But a fringe group, the British National Party, primarily racist, has recently demonstrated considerable anti-Semitism. It is made up of the National Labour Party and the White Defence League, two groups which had been spearheading opposition to the immigration of colored peoples into England. London, in recent years, has had its tragic Notting Hill riots and there may be more Negro-white conflicts ahead. But Britain — which drove out its Jews in 1290 and accepted them back in Cromwell's time - - today makes few distinctions because of religion.

The record is spotted in a few places. Some bias exists in the retail grocery trade and in the employment policies of a number of insurance companies. Certain clubs and resort hotels also discriminate. And being Jewish still inhibits a man from becoming a member of "the Establishment" of Britons who wear the "right" school ties, have the "proper" family backgrounds, estates, religion, and business connections. But these instances are hardly significant pitfalls to Britain's Jews.

The British Rothschilds and Sassoons are among old Jewish families in top British society. (Lionel Rothschild became the first Jewish member of Parliament in 1858.) Successful careers are open to Jews in most fields. They are freely accepted in the nation's universities and can make their mark in the public service. They have distinguished themselves in parliament and in government. Outstanding examples are Lord Hore-Belisha, Secretary of State for War during the early part of the last world conflict, and Sir Solly Zuckerman, now chief scientific advisor to the Minister of Defence.

It was in the closing decades of the last century that the British Jewish community began to grow. Prior to that the Jewish population was small, but it had made steady progress toward freedom and security over the past 300 years. In the 1880's Russian oppression brought 100,000 Jewish immigrants from eastern Europe to the British Isles. Between 1930 and 1950, there was another great influx, including many refugees from the Nazi terror. This has given the United Kingdom the largest Jewish community in western Europe, with a total of 450,000. Close to 300,000 Jews live in London, and about 100,000 are spread among five other large cities: Manchester, Leeds, Glasgow, Birmingham, and Liverpool.

Britain's Jewish community came of age during years of great crisis. The world-wide economic depression was followed by World War II; London and other cities lay under siege from the air. For a time Nazi invasion seemed imminent. The British fought gallantly, against odds. Eventually came the victory of the United Nations which saved Britain but not the British Empire. In the post-war austerity years, India and other former colonies gained self-government. The crisis reached the British mandate of Palestine too. The Empire was torn asunder in the greatest political and social upheaval in modern British history.

Yet, the British people managed to keep cool heads and their age-old freedoms. Extremism had no appeal and they successfully withstood the threat of native fascism and communism. True, Sir Oswald Mosley and his fascist cohorts made their weight felt in the streets of London during the thirties, creating considerable discord. But he was finally shoved aside by the force of events. He tried to make a comeback in the fifties, but it soon became evident that he had outlived his time. Since his decline, organized political anti-Semitism in the United Kingdom has gotten nowhere.

The true test of British liberalism came during the violent days when Britain surrendered her mandate in Palestine. The conflict between British soldiers and the Jewish fighters for freedom was bitter and bloody. Anti-British feelings rose high among the Jewish population in the United States and elsewhere and there was strong agitation to boycott British goods. The situation was aggravated when British soldiers were hanged by extremist elements in the Jewish underground. British newspapers reported the event in black headlines and the British people were shocked and horrified.

Nevertheless, feelings between Jews and non-Jews in Britain were not particularly exacerbated. The British people showed little hostility toward the Jews in their midst during the bitter Palestine controversy. Despite all, Britain's Jews showed little hesitation in opposing their government's policies in Palestine and urging a change. And yet, their loyalty was never questioned by either the government or by the people.

Political Zionism never won a mass following among Jews in the United Kingdom and not many of them emigrated to Israel. One cannot forget, however, that it was a British Jew of Polish birth, Chaim Weizmann, and Britain's Balfour Declaration that played a major role in the establishment of Israel. (Weizmann's discovery of acetone-butyl fermentation was of vital help to the British World War I effort. When David Lloyd-George, then minister of munitions, asked him what he wanted as compensation for his work as a chemist, Weizmann said, "For myself nothing; but something for my people.")

The Balfour Declaration stemmed from a peculiar set of political and historical conditions — but also from a characteristic quality of British liberalism. An illustration is the British reaction to the swastika desecrations more than a year ago. The outbreak in England drew angry protests from the public and expressions of outrage from Christian churches. The Home Secretary dramatized the situation by receiving Jewish deputations, and many thousands marched in orderly, silent protest to the German Embassy because the desecrations had started in Cologne.

Under the fruitful and democratic influence, Britain's Jews have made great economic and social advances over the past fifty years. At one time, many of them had been employed as unskilled or semi-skilled workers. Today, the employment patterns of Jews in Britain are close to those of the United States. British Jews are heavily represented in the manufacture of clothing and furniture and in the distribution of consumer goods. Many of them are in business for themselves or are in the professions.

Close to two-thirds of the Jewish working force are self-employed, and about one-fourth are in some profession. The percentage of Jews who enter college in order to prepare themselves for a professional career is large. One out of every 28 university students is Jewish, although the ratio of Jews in the total population is one to 100.

As in the United States, Jews have had brilliant careers in the British entertainment field. (Peter

MARRIAGES

MANLY-GROSSMAN

The marriage of Miss Doreen Grossman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grossman, 346 Hillhurst Boulevard, to Sheldon Manly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Manly, 2442 Danforth Avenue, was solemnized on August 6, at half-past five o'clock, at Beth Sholom Synagogue, by Rabbi David Monson, assisted by Cantor Samuel Frankel. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white silk organza, with a scooped neckline, three-quarter-length sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt, terminating in a cathedral train. It was trimmed with lace appliques, and seed-pearl-beads, around the neckline and sleeves; and the back and sides of the skirt. Her fingertip, bouffant tulle illusion veil, was held by a heart-shaped crown of the same material as her gown, with seed-pearl-beads; and she carried a white orchid and stephanotis, on a Bible. Miss Andrea Mandell, cousin of the bride, was maid of honour. Her gown was of shell-pink lace, over peau de soie; fashioned with V-neckline at the back, cap sleeves, and bell-shaped skirt. She had a headdress to match, with a short veil; and carried a cascade bouquet of baby roses, in colours from pale-pink to American Beauty-red. The bridesmaids were: Misses Bonnie Gold, cousin of the bride; Barbara Gross, and Sarah Rosen. Each wore a gown of shocking-pink peau de soie, with a scooped neckline, and bell-shaped skirt; and had a pillbox of the same material, with a short veil; and carried a semi-cascade bouquet of baby roses, to blend with that of the matron of honour. Marvin Grossman, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were: Allan and Jeffrey Manly, brothers of the groom; Lawrence Freedman, cousin of the bride; Frank Hoffman, cousin of the groom; Marvin Bernstein, Jerry Friedman, Seymour Swartz, and Harvey Dolman. The Sanctuary was decorated with arbors of American Beauty roses. A dinner and reception followed at the Synagogue, with four hundred guests present. American Beauty roses decorated the wall in back of the bride's table, and along the table-front. Each guest-table had a centerpiece of a tree-stump, banked with rainbow-dripped candles, and arrangements of roses. Mrs. Grossman, mother of the bride, chose an ice-pink, peau de soie sheath, with a tunic overskirt. It was trimmed with iridescent and seed-pearl-bead drops, around the neckline, on the front and back of the dress, and around the hem of the overskirt. Her headdress was of the same material, and pleated. Mrs. Manly, mother of the groom, wore a deep-rose peau de soie sheath, with an overskirt. It had a lace bodice, and lace trimming on the skirt, in the form of a cut-away coat; and she had a headdress of roses of the same material. Each had a mauve orchid wristlet. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Manly spent their honeymoon in Bermuda. They travelled via Trans-Canada Air Lines, the bride departing in a banana-coloured silk shantung dress, with a cut-away coat of the same material; and a maribou feathered hat of the same shade, with brown flecks; and had a white orchid corsage. They are residing at 11 Shallmar Boulevard. Here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mandel, and Robert, of London, Ont.; Jack Mandel, of Hamilton, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Grossman, of Frankfurt-Am-Main, West Germany; all uncles and aunts of the bride; and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Zaretsky, and Linda, and Andrea, of Bronx, N.Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. Max Hoffman, and Lillian, and Miriam, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; all cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. L. Hoffmitz, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. B. Antanoff, and Sheila, of Bronx, N.Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. H. Goldenberg, and Carol, and Calvin, of Alliston, Ont.; all uncles and aunts of the groom; Leo Borden, Mr. and Mrs. P. Saslove, and Miss Sonya Saslove, of Detroit, Mich.

MORRIS-WITTEN

Rosenberg, assisted by Cantor Joseph Cooper. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a light beige, silk dress, with its own jacket. Her shoulder-length, tulle illusion veil was of the same shade, gathered to a crown of beige and pale-bronze-coloured flowers. She carried a bible with pale beige orchids. Miss Arlene Zweig, the maid of honour, wore a dress of beige lace over ivory taffeta, with an old-gold-coloured sash; and had a matching headband. Her bouquet was of white roses and pompoms. Martin Keschen was best man. The ushers were: Hershel Morris, brother of the groom; Alan Freeman, Bert Jacobs, Norman Greenapoon, Louis Fruitman, and Jules Zeman. The 1962 Pontiac Has Styling Changes In Variety Of Models

Body restyling and engineering refinements are among the features of the 1962 Pontiac, as announced by General Motors of Canada. The most outstanding styling change is a totally new roofline on the Parisienne and Laurentian two-door hardtops. These models look amazingly like soft-top convertibles.

Pontiac has a new grill design as well as new tail lights. A new, lighter weight automatic transmission is available with the optional Astro Flame 250 h.p. engine only. The transmission is made of aluminum and is some 85 pounds lighter.

The 1962 Pontiac — Canadian-built series will be the Parisienne, Laurentian and Strato-Chief offering 13 models. Overall length of the Canadian Pontiacs is 211.6 inches; width is 78.6 inches; and the Pontiac's wheelbase is 119 inches.

In addition to the Canadian models, Pontiac will be available in the imported Bonneville (two- and four-door hardtops, four-door station wagon and convertible), a new sports model, Grand Prix, Star Chief (four-door hardtop and four-door sedan), Catalina (two- and four-door sedan, two- and four-door hardtop, six and nine passenger Safaris and convertible), and the smaller-sized four-cylinder Tempest.

For the first time, Tempest is available in a convertible model. The Tempest, North America's only production car with a front engine and rear transmission, is redesigned. It has a new grille and chrome ornamentation. In addition to the convertible, Tempest comes in a four-door sedan, four-door Safari station wagon, two-door coupe and two-door sports coupe.

On Sabbath nights, in many Jewish homes in Canada, a decanter of Mazel Tov wine finds its place on the starched tablecloth, right beside the challah.

Mazel Tov is a wine with a taste you'll 'remember', a ruby red, richly sweet 'kiddush' wine made of Concord grapes grown in the vineyards of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year, for every "simcha".

The John Birch Society: Ignore Or Investigate?

BY ALBERT VORSPAN, A DIRECTOR OF THE COMMISSION ON SOCIAL ACTION OF REFORM JUDAISM

American Jewish organizations are making no effort to conceal their mounting anxiety about the John Birch Society, an extremely reactionary anti-Communist organization which, in less than three years, has developed a wide and excited following in many parts of the country. Although the Birch Society has not given evidence of anti-Semitism, its totalitarian and ultra-rightist character trouble the Jewish organizations which have followed the Society's rise.

The Society has been widely exposed in the general press. The main outlines of the organization are now clear. The Society is the creature of one man, Robert Welch, a retired businessman who has now devoted himself completely to "anti-Communism." The Society is named after an American missionary who is said to have been the first American to be killed by the Chinese Communists. Organized into "cells" frankly modeled after the Communist apparatus, the radicals of the right acknowledge that they believe in fighting fire with fire.

It seems clear that Welch is making a powerful appeal to the malcontents and cranks who ironized Senator McCarthy and helped to create the movement identified as McCarthyism. The Senator is dead, but apparently the spirit of vigilantism is not without force in American life.

Ironically, the Birch Society appears to be much more reckless than the late Senator McCarthy ever was. The Society has organized to impeach Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren. It is waging war on the fluoridation of water, on mental health programs, on foreign aid, unionism, the United Nations, and "forced integration." Welch has ascribed Communism to Dwight Eisenhower, Allen Dulles, and many other distinguished Americans.

Welch is particularly hysterical about the Protestant clergy which, he repeatedly maintains, is infested with Communists. The distinguished National Council of Churches of Christ, representing thirty major Protestant denominations and some sixty million Protestant Americans, has been a special target of Welch's attacks. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, former president of the NCCC, has condemned the Birch outfit as "Fascist" and has warned the churches to combat the Society and its dangerous "fuehrer" principle of "monolithic leadership." It seems certain that the National Council's firm commitment to the social gospel is a red flag to the perfervid Birchites. Such charges can usually be expected to be followed by similar attacks on the rabbinate and Jewish organizations which share the National Council's belief in civil rights, civil liberties, world peace, and social reform.

The religious implications of the Birch Society will bear study. Is it mere coincidence that such a movement arises at a very time when the United States Government, under a vigorous and youthful leadership, is addressing itself to new frontiers of social change and world vision? Welch has announced that half his members are Roman Catholics. While liberal Roman Catholic magazines such as America and Commonweal have scoffed at the Birch Society, some high Roman Catholic prelates have given the group aid, comfort, and an aura of respectability.

Cardinal Cushing of Boston has said that the Society deserves support as a dedicated foe of Communism. The hard anti-Communism which animates segments of Roman Catholicism in America, together with distress about President Kennedy's liberalism and frustrations about America's decline in world prestige, may have made the Birch activism an appealing outlet to many American Catholics. In addition, Mid-western isolationists and Southern segregationists of all faiths apparently find in the simple black-and-white answers of the Society a welcome escape from the complexities of the 20th century.

Jewish antennae are acute enough to know that all this ultimately spells trouble for the Jewish community. Although Joseph McCarthy was never an anti-Semite, American Jewry was quick to see the dangers of the primitivism he engendered. Jews were anti-McCarthyists long before most Americans recognized the menace to civil liberties and American traditions which he represented. Indeed, the American Jewish Congress had gone so far as to urge Senate censure of McCarthy. Even if Welch continues to disavow anti-Semitism, the nature of his following is such that difficulty is inevitable.

Some small evidence of this is already appearing. In Culver City, California, the local school board arranged to co-sponsor, with a so-called "Christian Anti-Communist League," the appearance of Herbert Philbrick at local school assemblies. A professional anti-Communist, Philbrick had expressed warm admiration for the Birch Society. Rabbi Herschel Lymon, of Temple Akiba, publicly denounced the plan and condemned the Birch Society and the "Christian Anti-Communist League" as extremists who poison the wells of public discussion. It is likely that Jewish leaders will have to play the role of lightning rods in many such local situations.

The question on the agenda of many Jewish community relations agencies and religious bodies is: what should be done about the Birch Society? Counsels vary: One approach has been followed by the Rabbinical Council of America, an Orthodox group, which urged the Attorney General to investigate the Society and, if it is found to be subversive, to place it on the Attorney General's list. Some other American figures have appealed to the House Un-American Activities Committee to investigate the Birchites. The HUAC has shown no disposition to investigate such groups on the right. Robert Kennedy, the Attorney General, has indicated that it would be better to ridicule the Birch group than to dignify it by an investigation.

Most Jewish organizations would probably prefer the counsel of the Attorney General to that of the Rabbinical Council. A governmental investigation of such an organization, however wild its ideology, raises deep questions of civil liberties. Many Jewish groups and other civil libertarian bodies have long had misgivings about the propriety of a House Un-American Activities Committee and of an Attorney General's list of "subversive organizations."

Even Welch and his wide-eyed crusaders have a right to associate and speak their piece. Indeed, some acute observers feel that the Society serves a useful function. As Shad Polier, of the American Jewish Congress, put it: "Just as sores and carbuncles have value in indicating a sick condition of the human body, so the Society indicates the extent to which a certain emotional sickness is being suffered by part of the body politic."

Rather than to call upon the Government to repress them, it is wiser and more consistent with American tradition to expose the Birch Society to the glare of publicity and rely on the fairness and judgment of the American people.

EICHMANN TRIAL REVIEWS NAZI ATTEMPT AT REVOLUTION TO TURN BACK PROGRESS

Judge Halevi found it hard to believe that the Gestapo should have yielded to such pressure until the witness explained that the Gestapo "wanted the dollars."

One prosecution document concerning Artukovic was a Croatian newspaper report of a speech he made to the Croatian People's Assembly on February 25, 1942. It quoted him as having listed "Jews, Communists and Free Masons as enemies of the Croatian people," says the New York Times. Artukovic described Communism as "the child of Jewry" and went on to write that Croatia had solved the so-called Jewish problem by "forceful and healthy action," the paper said.

Artukovic told the New York Times at his home in Surfside, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles, that he was "tired of all these years of lying about me." He denied knowledge of Eichmann or complicity in mass murders. He said also that he had never heard of Mr. Arnon who brought up his name at the Eichmann trial.

The United States Government in 1959 refused to extradite Artukovic to Yugoslavia on the ground that the Yugoslav government had failed to present sufficient grounds for the action. The Yugoslav Government complained that the decision was "profoundly unjust."

Artukovic came to the United States with his family in 1948 and was discovered in 1951 living near Los Angeles working as a bookkeeper for a contracting concern owned by relatives there. A Yugoslav consular official obtained a warrant for Artukovic's arrest as a war criminal.

Artukovic argued in his defense against extradition that he was a political refugee from Communist Yugoslavia and that he was not guilty of the 1,293 deaths specifically charged to him.

Eichmann testified that he had tried in vain to "wriggle out" of a reporting assignment for he hated what he saw, particularly a "fountain of blood" he had observed spouting from a mass grave at Lvov, in the western Ukraine. This kept recurring in his thoughts, he said.

Murmurs of disbelief and a derisive whistle were heard from the public gallery when Eichmann, talking rapidly, declared his abhorrence of genocide. Recalling earlier testimony in which he portrayed himself as a promoter of a plan for shipping all Jews to Madagascar, says the New York Times, Eichmann said he had recoiled in horror from "the final solution," the Nazi term for annihilation of the Jews.

He made four trips, "most reluctantly," to extermination sites, Eichmann continued. At Minsk, in Byelorussia, he saw a baby shot in his mother's arms, he testified. At Auschwitz, in southern Poland, he saw corpses burning on a pyre. He expressed indignation that he, a sensitive man, had been forced to witness such things.

"It is most particularly sad," he said, "that this should happen to me * * * to me who cherished the Madagascar plan and who never thought of a violent solution to the Jewish problem. This bloodstained solution by brute force was contrary to all my strivings. It was repugnant to me."

Eichmann's voice betrayed no emotion and only the swiftness of his speech indicated some possible inner turmoil. He brought out the words quickly, as if he found the recital tedious and wanted to finish it in all possible haste.

He had been more colorful during interrogation by the Israeli police in describing his trips to the death sites. The police recordings, played earlier in the trial, had Eichmann's voice breaking in horror and disgust when he told of the blood fountain at Lvov.

He also had told the police how he found solace after the Minsk shootings by studying the pleasant, yellow railroad station at Lvov, which brought to his mind the placid stately days of Emperor Franz Josef when Lvov was named Lemberg and was part of the Hapsburg empire.

Eichmann said he had seen the fountain of blood at Lvov while en route to Lubin, in eastern Poland, to carry a letter to General Globocnik of the S. S. authorizing the killing of 150,000 Jews, reports the New York Times. He said he recalled this trip vividly because, "I thought it rather ridiculous on Globocnik's part to ask for authorization because the operation was already almost completed."

Sellers is a current example.) One finds in London's theater district — near Picadilly Circus and in Soho — the atmosphere of New York's Times Square. Jewish entrepreneurs and kosher restaurants are part of the picture. It is a scene that enlivened the recent British film Expresso Bongo, which was based on Wolf Mankewitz's popular stage musical. Its earthy background has captured the imagination of a whole new generation of playwrights who have infused the British theater with fresh vitality and purpose.

The entire literary scene in Britain has come alive with new personalities shaped by the war and the aftermath of great social change. Much of current British writing is characterized by social criticism. Numbered among the new writers are several of the Jewish faith, among them Arnold Wesker, Harold Pinter, Peter Shaffer, Bernard Kops, and Lionel Hart.

There appears to be a high percentage of intermarriage among British Jews accompanying their economic and social gains. About 9% of Jewish marriages in England are mixed, against the comparable figure of 7% in the United States.

The increase in intermarriage mirrors profound changes that have gradually caught up with the one-time predominantly immigrant group, bringing a new language, new modes, and new ways of living. Fifty years ago, the living language of 30,000 British families was Yiddish, which is now rapidly disappearing. Mothers bought their meat in kosher butcher stores; the children received some Jewish education. Now traditional Judaism among the younger generation has been petering out.

This decline in traditional influences has been a common experience among all religious groups. Both church and synagogue membership has fallen off. In the last century more than half of British-Jewish adult males belonged to a synagogue. Today no more than 25 percent do. (In 1956-57, about 60 percent of American Jews were believed to be identified in one way or another with the synagogue.)

However, the Bnai Brith Hillel Foundations have been expanding their work, and university students are showing an increased interest in the Hebrew seminars that have been organized by the Jewish Agency for Israel. At the same time, there has been an increase in the number of Bnai Brith lodges in Britain and in their membership. The moving force behind Bnai Brith activities in Britain — and Bnai Brith's foremost spokesman there — is Jack Morrison. Mr. Morrison is also an officer of the Bnai Brith International Council which has a London office headed by Haym Pinner.

As a whole, the communal organizations of British Jewry are unique and effective. Foremost is the Board of Deputies of British Jews, which dates back to 1760. It is composed of elected delegates from communities throughout Britain. Its authority to speak for the Jewish community as a whole has been under challenge in recent years, but its prestige and influence are still firm.

Then there is the Chief Rabbinate. Its authority in religious matters is accepted by the Orthodox United Synagogue of Britain as well as by the Jewish communities scattered throughout the whole British Commonwealth. Another agency is the Trades Advisory Council. It was established in 1938 as an advisory body to the Board of Deputies and grew from the effort to combat the rise of anti-Semitism in the thirties at the height of Mosley's influence. The Council's expressed aim is to "protect the good name of Jewry, and to combat anti-Semitism arising out of trade, commerce, and industry." Thus, it is more circumscribed than some of the American Jewish human relations agencies. Essentially, the Council is a self-policy organization for its 8,000 members.

Not least in importance is the Anglo-Jewish Association which was founded in 1871 to promote educational work in behalf of Jews living in backward areas. It was for a time anti-Zionist and opposed to the Balfour Declaration. Though no longer anti-Zionist, it speaks for some of the non-Zionist elements in British Jewry.

These communal agencies continue to have their influence despite the changes that have transformed some segments of British Jewry. Come what may, Jews in Britain today have become integrated at almost all levels of society, enjoying equal status with the rest of the population. They enjoy the security and freedom and dignity of American Jewry. And that's a great deal, indeed.
